

Programme Objectives

This Geneva Programme Global Leadership (GPGL) provides senior university students and young professionals with an in-depth briefing and exposure to the global policy debates on issues related to different aspects of sustainability and governance of the global system. It is envisioned that such in-depth briefing and first hand experiential learning will facilitate the development of a global perspective, cultivate a system thinking mindset and elicit humanitarian interests amongst the participants.

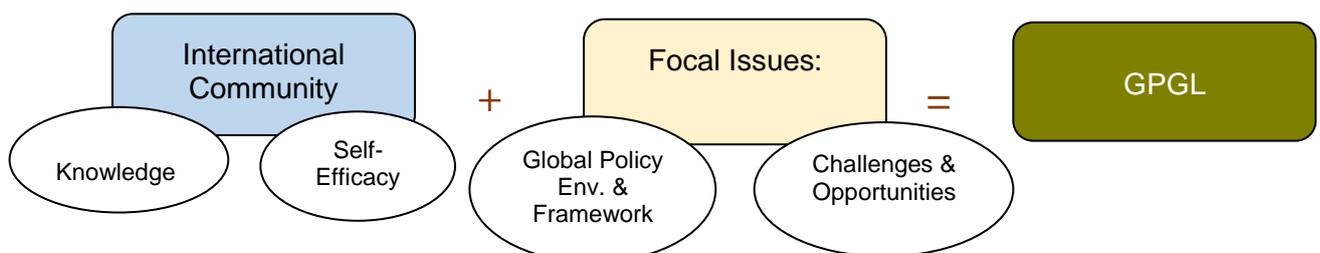

Programme Structure Framework

This Geneva Programme Global Leadership (GPGL) will be a complementary learning experience to the studies at university level. GPGL creates synergies between general Arts and Sciences studies and topical studies focused on the Geneva based international community and actors. The programme outlined below is integrated with the use of a “problem based learning” approach so that participants can go deeper into a specific issue of sustainable development, reflected in the recently adopted 2030 development agenda, namely Sustainable Development Goals .

GPGL will be of two weeks duration and will take place in Geneva. With successful completion of the course and submitting a 1000 words essay, a certificate will be granted jointly issued by the CSEND and the partner university. (Note 1).

(Note 1. Partnering university can decide and grant the number of credits for the GPGL course work.)

The GPGL will be structured in a modular manner, consisting of two components: Common Base and Focal Issues. Focal issues may vary from year to year according to demand and needs of the partnering university.

I. Common Base

1. Evolution of the global geo-political environment
2. Key challenges resulting from technology driven integration, loosening of boundaries of

- citizenship, IT based transparency, government services, labour mobility and climate change
3. Global governance infrastructure. landscapes and sustainable development goals (SDGs)
 4. Role of non-state actors (i.e., global enterprises, transnational NGOs and International organisations) and available platforms and modalities for NGO participation in global governance
- II. Focal Issues specific to the interests of the partner university and aligned with the technical expertise of the UN agencies, international organisations and NGOs residing in Geneva International.

For 2016, the suggested focal topics are: climate change, humanitarian crisis, trade.
