Brief Context on Urban Governance in India

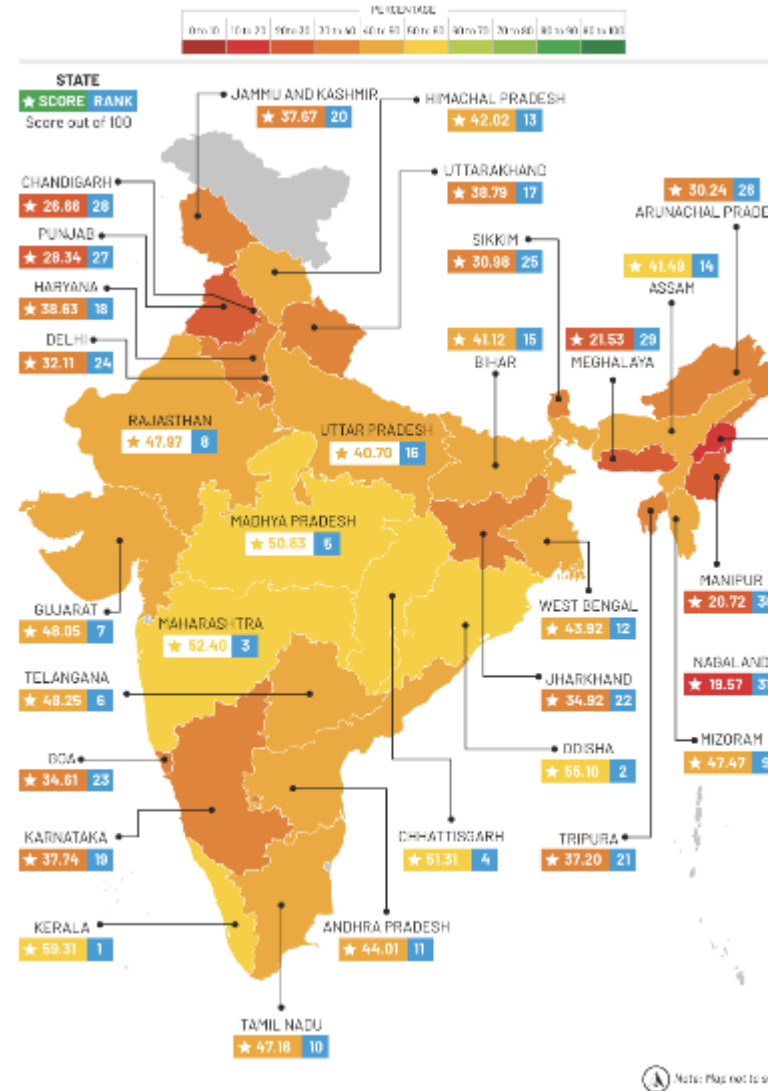

- Urban development in India is a state subject.
- 73rd and 74th Constitutional amendment, 1993: Article 243P (e) recognizes a municipality as an institution of self-government and Article 243W proposes that the Legislature of a State may, by law, endow “the Municipalities with such powers and authority as may be necessary to enable them to function as institutions of self-government and such law may contain provisions for the devolution of powers and responsibilities upon Municipalities.”
- Constitutional Amendment has recommended’ that state governments assign municipalities a set of 18 functions under the Twelfth Schedule.
- Amendment is less clear on the devolution of finances leaving it to the discretion of state legislatures
- Devolution of functions – in partial compliance, and rarely accompanied by functionaries and funds

Nudging Reforms: Right to Public Services Legislation

Many states enacted the Right to Public Services Act between 2010 and 2015, which created time-bound guarantees in delivery of public services rendered by Government to the citizens. Many of these public services such as, issuing caste, birth, marriage and domicile certificates, electric connections, voter's card, ration cards, copies of land records, are the functions of local governments. The Act includes provision for penalizing or undertaking disciplinary proceedings on officials if a citizen's complaint for failure to comply with time-bound service delivery is accepted.

Nudging Reforms : Participatory Budgeting

Cities have adopted participatory budgeting to varying degrees. Bangalore was among the first cities to embed citizens' priorities in the budget. More recently, Pune has successfully approached citizen engagement in partnership with local NGOs.

Nudging Reforms : Social Audits and Citizen Report Cards

The flagship national urban missions of India incorporate tools such as an Integrated Command and Control Centre (ICCC) and associated mobile applications that enable urban residents to report civic issues to the municipal authority. The means of reporting include geo-tagged pictures to enable effective grievance redressal.

Moreover, such programmes have sought to build a framework for the performance review of ULBs led by a city's residents. For example, the Municipal Performance Index and the Ease of Living Index introduced by the Ministry of Housing and Urban Affairs (MoHUA) measure the feedback and perception of a city's residents, among other parameters, to give a comprehensive score and ranking to the participating municipal bodies

Nudging Reforms : Fourth Tier of Governance - Odisha

- Empowered landscape of CBOs as Implementing Partners for national and state level missions: Mission Shakti groups, Swachha Sathis, Jal Sathis, SDAs
- Systematically building the capacities, institutional strengthening and economic empowerment of the SDA as the fourth tier of governance.
- Partnership for service delivery in water, sanitation, the subsidized food programme, employment schemes and other municipal functions.
- Developing business models, SOPs, guidelines, protocols, standardization, model service contracts to engage CBOs.
- On 10 November 2022, the Government of Odisha announced the recognition of SDAs as the fourth tier of government, making them partners in the development and governance process. Municipal bodies have signed memorandum of understanding (MoUs) to empower SDAs to self-govern the Biju Adarsh Colonies. Additionally, 25% of the municipal fund has been statutorily earmarked for SDAs.

Designing a Carbon-Zero Neighbourhood in Paris

- Located on a former degraded industrial space between railway tracks—area of surface of 1.3 hectares
- Key features:
 - Layout and design of the buildings carefully considered to limit energy requirements for heating, cooling and lighting as much as possible
 - On-site energy production with bio-solar roofs
 - Construction itself used locally sourced materials or low-carbon concrete.
 - Buildings equipped with an innovative heat recovery system; pumps capture the heat from gray water
 - Cars not included in the mobility plans in any way. Instead, a soft mobility track connects the buildings to the nearby train station.

- Developer undertakes to follow the life of the district for ten years and testify to the city government whether the commitments in terms of social integration and sustainable development are being followed
- Preventive monitoring of buildings (for monitoring consumption and the operation of heat pumps) to meet carbon commitments to the city government

Kampala turns data into action against COVID-19 inequalities

- Effects of national shutdown were being felt more deeply by disadvantaged groups
- Vast majority of residents in Kampala make their living through informal employment which often means they rely on daily trade to feed themselves and their families (over 87% of total employment is informal).
- City authorities took a data-based and equity-oriented approach to the COVID-19 response: data was collected on how COVID-19 impacts equity to guide decision-making and use of limited resources
- Kampala's COVID-19 Vulnerability Framework measured exposure in transport hubs, shopping centres, population density, and transactional offices:
 - Considers factors such as food security, level of income, access to healthcare, etc.
 - Data points generate the COVID-19 Vulnerability Index, an interactive map displaying COVID-19 vulnerability by parish
- Data gathered will not only help even out inequalities but also help to inform preparedness for reducing the impacts of future health emergencies.

Participation and Effective Civic Engagement

Participatory Budgeting in Chile

- A relatively recent practice in Chile, but it has become deeply ingrained in local participation policies.
- Mechanisms for participatory budgeting date back to 2003, and through the support of civil society it has been possible to extend the practice.
- Currently, one regional government and 37 municipal governments have adopted participatory budgeting processes
- The main feature of participatory budgeting in Chile is that it has been largely developed by the political will of local authorities
- This mechanism has been used in Chile to define budget priorities for projects in a municipality, or in neighbourhoods.
- Done through assemblies, where projects are preselected, and then a general voting process is held in which all citizens over 15 years of age can participate to make the final selection

- By facilitating the mainstreaming of participatory processes, the six cities improved:
 - Communications between the local government and citizens;
 - The appreciation for multi-stakeholder dialogue among the municipalities and the civic society
 - Ownership of the city development initiatives
 - and actions among citizens.
- Training to over 1,800 city stakeholders; production of voluntary local reports
